

Great Homes and Destinations

What You Get for ...$1.36 Million

Erik Jacobs for The New York Times

A three-bedroom penthouse in a 2004 building overlooking Boston Harbor is on the market for $1.35 million. It is in area referred to as the Seaport District or the South Boston Waterfront.

Great Homes and Destinations

What You Get for ...$1.36 Million

Erik Jacobs for The New York Times

The apartment has two levels, anchored by a double-height living room with a limestone fireplace, 20-foot ceilings and two walls of windows overlooking the harbor.

Great Homes and Destinations

What You Get for ...$1.36 Million

Erik Jacobs for The New York Times

Next to the living room, there's a dining area.

The kitchen has double ovens, a Viking refrigerator and wine storage for 144 bottles.

Erik Jacobs for The New York Times

A view of the stairwell, with the wine storage at right.

Erik Jacobs for The New York Times

The master bedroom, on the upper level, has views of the harbor. It's part of a suite with a walk-in closet and a bathroom.

Erik Jacobs for The New York Times

The master bathroom has two sinks and a soaking tub.

Erik Jacobs for The New York Times

There's a private balcony off the living room.

Erik Jacobs for The New York Times